

About the Authors

moving to Berkeley, she was on the psychology faculty at Vanderbilt University (1991–1998). At both Vanderbilt and UC Berkeley, she has taught a course in abnormal psychology every year. She is

ANN M. KRING is Associate Professor of Psychology at the University of California at Berkeley where she has served as the Director of the Clinical Science Program and Psychology Clinic. She received a B.S. from Ball State University and her M.A. and Ph.D. from the State University of New York at Stony Brook. Her internship in clinical psychology was completed at Bellevue Hospital and Kirby Forensic Psychiatric Center, in New York. Before on the editorial board of the Journal of Abnormal Psychology, Emotion, Applied and Preventive Psychology, and Journal of Personality Research, and was formerly an Associate Editor for Cognition and Emotion. She is currently a member of the Executive Board for the Society for Research in Psychopathology.

In 1997 she was awarded a Young Investigator award from the National Alliance for Research on Schizophrenia and Depression, and in 2006 she was awarded the Joseph Zubin Memorial Fund Award in recognition of her research in schizophrenia. Her current research focus is on emotion and psychopathology, with a specific interest in the emotional features of schizophrenia, the linkage between attention and emotion in schizophrenia, and the social and emotional features of social anxiety and depression. A second major focus of Kring's research is on the origins and consequences of individual differences in emotional expressivity and how gender and social context shape the experience and expression of emotion.

psychology faculty at the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Dr. Davison is a Fellow of the American Psychological Association and has served on the Board of Scientific Affairs, on the Committee on Scientific Awards, on the Council of Representatives, and on the Continuing Professional Education Committee.

GERALD C. DAVISON is Professor and Chair of the Department of Psychology at the University of Southern California, where he was also Director of Clinical Training from 1979 to 1984. He earned his B.A. from Harvard in 1961, was a Fulbright Scholar in Germany the following year, and obtained his Ph.D. from Stanford in 1962. From 1994 to 1996 he served as Interim Dean of the USC Annenberg School for Communication. Previously he was on the

He is also a Charter Fellow of the American Psychological Society, on the Advisory Board of the Society for the Exploration of Psychotherapy Integration, a past president of the Association for Advancement of Behavior Therapy, and a Distinguished Founding Fellow of the Academy of Cognitive Therapy. He served two terms on the National Academy of Sciences/National Research Council Committee on Techniques for the Enhancement of Human Performance. In 2006–2007 he is Chair of the Council of Graduate Departments of Psychology as well as President of the Society of Clinical Psychology (Division 12 of the American Psychological Association).

In 1988 Davison received an outstanding achievement award from APA's Board of Social and Ethical Responsibility; in 1989 was the recipient of the Albert S. Raubenheimer Distinguished Faculty Award from USC's College of Letters, Arts and Sciences; in 1993 won the Associates Award for Excellence in Teaching, a university-wide prize; in 1995 received the Distinguished Psychologist Award from the Los Angeles County Psychological Association; in 1997 was given the Outstanding Educator Award of the Association for Advancement of Behavior Therapy; in 2003 received the Lifetime Achievement Award from AABT; and in 2005 was the recipient of the USC Mellon Award for Excellence in Mentoring. At USC he was a Faculty Fellow in the Center for Excellence in Teaching from 2001 to 2003.

Among his more than 130 publications, his book Clinical Behavior Therapy, co-authored in 1976 with Marvin Goldfried and reissued in expanded form in 1994, is one of two publications that have been recognized as Citation Classics by the Social Sciences Citation Index; it appears in German and Spanish translation. Davison is also on the editorial board of several professional journals, including Behavior Therapy, Cognitive Therapy and Research, Journal of Cognitive Psychotherapy, Journal of Psychotherapy Integration, Journal of Clinical Psychology, and Clinical Psychology: Science and Practice. His publications emphasize experimental and philosophical analyses of psychopathology, assessment, and therapeutic change. His current research program focuses on the relationships between cognition and a variety of behavioral and emotional problems via his articulated thoughts in simulated situations paradigm.

JOHN M. NEALE is Professor Emeritus of Psychology at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, where he regularly taught the undergraduate course in abnormal psychology. He received his B.A. from the University of Toronto and his M.A. and Ph.D. from Vanderbilt University. His internship in clinical psychology was as a Fellow in Medical Psychology at the Langley Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute. In 1975 he was a Visiting Fellow at the Institute of Psychiatry, London, England. In 1974 he won the American Psychological Association's Early Career Award for his research on cognitive processes in schizophrenia. In 1991 he won a Distinguished Scientist Award from the American Psychological Association's Society for a Science of Clinical Psychology. He has been on the editorial boards of several journals and has been Associate Editor of the Journal of Abnormal Psychology. Besides his numerous articles in professional journals, he has published books on the effects of televised violence on children, research methodology, schizophrenia, case studies in abnormal psychology, and psychological influences on health. Schizophrenia was a major focus of his research, and he also conducted research on the influence of stress on health.

SHERI L. JOHNSON received her B.A. from Salem College in 1982 and her Ph.D. from the University of Pittsburgh in 1992. She completed an internship and postdoctoral fellowship at Brown University, and she was a clinical assistant professor at Brown from 1993–1995. Since that time, she has been teaching in the Department of Psychology at the University of Miami, where she is currently an Associate Professor of Psychology with a joint appointment in the Department of Psychiatry and Human Behavior. She regularly teaches courses on abnormal psychology at undergraduate and graduate levels.

In 1993, Johnson received the Young Investigator Award from the National Alliance for Research in Schizophrenia and Depression. In 2001 and 2005, she received the Award for Excellence in Graduate Teaching from the Department of Psychology at the University of Miami. Dr. Johnson's previous books include Psychological Treatments of Bipolar Disorder, which has been published in paperback, and Stress, Coping and Depression. She is currently co-editing a book on Emotion and Psychopathology. She has published more than 60 articles and chapters. She is an associate editor for Applied and Preventive Psychology and Cognition and Emotion, and she serves on the editorial board for Psychology and Psychotherapy and Journal of Cognitive Psychotherapy: An International Quarterly. She is a member of the Executive Board for the Emotion Research Group and for the Society for Research in Psychopathology. Her work has been supported by grants from the National Alliance of Research on Schizophrenia and Depression, the National Institute of Mental Health, and the National Cancer Institute. Her research is focused on understanding the psychological and socioenvironmental factors that shape the course of mania and major depression.