DESCRIPTION

This book offers a survey of the history and archaeology of the Longobards (known until recently as the Lombards), one of the many barbarian tribes who exploited the collapse of the Roman Empire.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Neil Christie was an undergraduate and postgraduate student at the University of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and subsequently held a Scholarship at the British School at Rome, the Sir James Knott Fellowship (Newcastle) and a British Academy Post-Doctoral Fellowship at the University of Oxford. He is currently Lecturer in Medieval Archaeology in the School of Archaeological Studies at the University of Leicester.

FEATURES

* First up-to-date guide to the "Lombards" in the English language.

* Scholarly - sound synthesis and original research, including up-to-date archaeological research.
* Well-written and accessible.

For additional product details, please visit https://www.wiley.com/en-us