DESCRIPTION

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Norbert Hornstein is Professor of Linguistics at the University of Maryland, College Park. His research and teaching include both natural language semantics and syntactic theory. He is series editor of the Blackwell/Maryland Lectures in Language and Cognition, and his other publications include: Logical Form: From GB to Minimalism (Blackwell, 1995); Verb Movement (edited, with David Lightfoot, 1994); As Time Goes By: Tense and Universal Grammar (1990); and Logic as Grammar: An Approach to Meaning in Natural Language (1984).

FEATURES

Unifies various areas of inquiry under one theoretical approach.

Incorporates greater empirical range than other work in this research paradigm.
Provides successful explanation of the Minimalist Program.

Guides readers through several long-standing puzzles in syntactic theory.