This important anthology includes articles by leading scholars on the theme of International Relations and the New Inequality, concentrating on the nexus between knowledge and power. Theoretically and methodologically diverse, this book appeals to the general reader and the specialist alike interested in reading the shape of our contemporary world.

- The first collection of its kind on the theme of International Inequality in the field of International Relations.

- The contributors to this important anthology who are leaders in their respective fields come together for the first time to address the theme of international inequality.

- An excellent contribution to current debates on globalization, inequality, and the changing architecture of world politics.

Mustapha Kamal Pasha is Past-Program Chair of the International Studies Association and Associate Professor of International Relations at the School of International Service, American University in Washington, D.C.
Craig N. Murphy is Past-President of the International Studies Association and Professor of Political Science, Wellesley College, Wellesley, Massachusetts.

FEATURES

• The first collection of its kind on the theme of International Inequality in the field of International Relations.

• The contributors to this important anthology who are leaders in their respective fields come together for the first time to address the theme of international inequality.

• An excellent contribution to current debates on globalization, inequality, and the changing architecture of world politics.

SERIES

International Studies Review Presidential Series

To purchase this product, please visit https://www.wiley.com/en-us/9781405108676