DESCRIPTION

In this book, fourteen leading philosophers reflect on the philosophical implications of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

• A philosophical reflection on the implications of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

• Consists of fourteen essays written by leading philosophers, most of which have been specially commissioned for this volume.

• Engages with a broad range of contemporary issues, such as American imperialism, anti-Americanism, Bush’s ‘War on Terror’, and the role of the media.

• Looks at how the terrorist attacks of 9/11 have altered the terms and categories of philosophical debate.

• Considers the repercussions for justice, human rights and international law.
ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Tom Rockmore is Professor of Philosophy at Duquesne University. His previous publications include Cognition: An Introduction to Hegel's Phenomenology of Spirit (1997), Marx after Marxism (Blackwell Publishing, 2002) and Before and After Hegel: A Historical Introduction to Hegel's Thought (2003).

FEATURES

- Consists of fourteen essays written by leading philosophers, most of which have been specially commissioned for this volume.
- Engages with a broad range of contemporary issues, such as American imperialism, anti-Americanism, Bush’s ‘War on Terror’, and the role of the media.
- Looks at how the terrorist attacks of 9/11 have altered the terms and categories of philosophical debate.
- Considers the repercussions for justice, human rights and international law.
SERIES

Metaphilosophy

For additional product details, please visit https://www.wiley.com/en-us