• Uses case studies and other text box material to illustrate the contents of each chapter

• Provides an accessible introduction to key areas of policy while inviting readers to consider these in historical, social, and comparative context

• Investigates current constitutional changes and their potential impact upon social policy

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Michael Hill is Emeritus Professor of Social Policy at the University of Newcastle upon Tyne and Visiting Professor at Queen Mary College, University of London and the University of Brighton. He is the author of numerous books on Social Policy and the study of policy processes.
Zoë Irving is lecturer in Comparative Social Policy at the University of Sheffield. She is co-editor of Policy Reconsidered, Meanings Politics and Practices (2007) and has published in the areas of gender and employment and learning and teaching Social Policy.

NEW TO EDITION

The new edition includes case studies that review contemporary topics and examples, new chapters, and a greater emphasis on key principles, themes, and issues within the policy areas whilst considering policy changes since the previous edition. The introductory chapter will be rewritten with a more contemporary focus and a more thematic approach will be taken. Throughout the book the treatment of the influence of the EU will be augmented by greater attention to wider global influences (UN, WHO, World Bank/IMF ILO).
